Trying to Understand a Changing World

Jamil Chade has been a correspondent in Europe for two decades and has his office at the UN headquarters in Geneva. With missions to over 70 countries, the journalist from São Paulo is part of Transparency International, a global network of specialists in over 100 countries to end the injustice of corruption. He was president of the Foreign Press Association in Switzerland and regularly contributes to international TV programs broadcasted by BBC, CNN, CCTV, Al Jazeera, France24, La Sexta and others. Living in Switzerland since 2000, Chade is the author of six books, three of which were finalists for the Jabuti Award, the most traditional and prestigious literary prize in Brazil. In Switzerland, one of his books won the Nicolas Bouvier Prize. Chade was also twice elected as the best Brazilian foreign correspondent of the Comuniqué-se Award, the most important in Brazilian journalism.

Rights to a future

Sônia Guajajara is among the most prominent indigenous leaders of Brazil. For many years, she has been on the forefront of the country's indigenous and environmental movement. Her work against deforestation and land grabbing in indigenous territories on the national level, has brought her international attention. Sônia regularly participates in international fora, such as the UN Human Rights Council and the UN Climate Negotiations. Sônia's home lies in the indigenous territory Arariboia in Northeastern Brazil. She got her BAs in Letters and Nursing and Specialization in Special Education from the State University of Maranhão. Sônia coordinates Brazil's biggest indigenous organization, the Articulation of Indigenous Peoples of Brazil (ABIP). She was the first indigenous person to run for the vice-presidency in Brazil (2018).
